D. C. CHANCES BRIGHT TO GET MAIN OFFICES OF U.S. LEGION

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 10.—Campaigning for twenty-four hours on the part of the District of Columbia advance guard has brightened the outlook for the National Capital securing the permanent national headquarters of the American Legion. It now appears Washington will have strong backing when the question comes up for final debate during the last session, Wednesday, of the first annual convention of the legion.

There are few here who have not come with some set purpose. Some want the next convention. Others are after the strongest possible recommendation in regard to a bonus and so on. It seems to be a case, plain and simple, of "you help us and we'll help you," and, of course, the Washingtonians are in a position to lend a helping hand in some cases. Few are underestimating the strength of the District delegation and the powerful influence of the legion at the seat of the Government.

Two Big Delegations May Aid.

Two of the most important delegations which virtually have been pledged are Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. Kenneth McRae, whose official capacity has been as liaison officer between legion headquarters at New York and the various Government departments, has been one of the hardest working members of the Washington delegation. It was McRae who took it upon himself to "try out" the Pennsylvania and Massachusetts voting strength, as originally decided, is 200, and Pennsylvania's 80. Colonel Jones, chairman of the Washington delegation, and one of the strongest candidates for the office of commander-in-chief, received a telegram this morning from Major Daniel J. Donovan, one of the District delegates who had been expected to arrive this morning, in which he expressed doubt as to whether he will be able to make the trip. Major Donovan has been suffering with a heavy cold and has been advised by his physician not to make the trip. His absence would be felt keenly, as he is regarded as one of the strongest and most effective speakers of the Washington delegation. He had been expected to make the nominating speech for Colonel Jones.

Twenty Committees Named.

In place of the seven committees originally appointed to handle the business of the convention, twenty have been named as a result of yesterday's caucus of national executive officers. The Washington representatives are: Credentials, Fisk; rules of the convention, Leonard; permanent organization of the convention, Atkinson; eligibility, Imirie; auxiliaries, Harvey; political restrictions, Stern; finance and national dues and constitution and organization, Jones; emblem, Mann; legislation, Atkinson; next meeting place, Davis; permanent headquarters, Donovan; post activities and memorials, Stokes; employment, McRae; war risk insurance, Hill; beneficial legislation, McRae; military policy, Rollins; anti-American propaganda, Kessler; resolutions, Peyser.

Bonus Question Important.

The question of the bonus is coming in for a whole lot of serious consideration. The plan that probably will be supported is that familiarly known as the "consolidated." This in short gives a choice of one of three plans. First, the bonus in some form; second, vocational training; and third, a Government loan for the purchase of a home. Each of these has a strong following and the general belief seems to be that any ex-soldier would be content with one of the plans offered under the consolidation scheme.

The District delegates have interested themselves in many questions that are expected to develop red hot debate on the floor of the convention. The Bennett Clark and Theodore Roosevelt faction of Paris caucus fame, according to reports from some quarters, are due for a clash. Young Roosevelt is here. It is understood Clark will not attend. The contention seems to be that Clark, after having been put in power at the Paris caucus was suddenly ordered away to another point in France while Roosevelt replaced him, and was given opportunity to carry the ideas of the caucus to America for development. This was accomplished at the St. Louis caucus. Clark's supporters are determined to make a stand and demand an explanation. There are many in camps here ready to fight "the Old Guard," which, they claim, includes "too many colonels and lieutenant colonels." More strength for the enlisted men is generally desired and few believe it will not be forthcoming.

Many Sleep On Army Cots.

The Washington delegation is particularly fortunate in that it has been comfortably quartered at the Hotel Andrews, one of the best here. Minneapolis housing situation just now is much the same as that of Washington during the war. The city officials are doing their best to handle the situation, but are up against a hard problem. Marshall Field, son of the wealthy Chicago merchant, and Colonel Foreman, head of the Illinois delegation, were among the many who spent last night on army cots under the roof of a welfare organization. The men accepted the situation gracefully.

According to present arrangements the Washington contingent will remain here until late Wednesday night, or Thursday morning, which means that they probably will be home by Saturday.

MAKES 4 $1 BILLS LOOK LIKE $4,000

Jewelry Buyer Has Stage Prestidigitator Lashed to the Mast.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Police detectives are searching today for a prestidigitator who made four $1 bills look like $4,000 when he exchanged them for jewelry valued at that amount by two young women who were parties to the transaction. The two victims, Miss Emily Todd and Miss Mary Reynolds, were witnesses yesterday in the West Side court in the case of Richard Murray, a salesman, who introduced them to the missing jewelry buyer and told Magistrate Bernard Douras the circumstances.

Miss Todd said she had jewelry which she informed Murray she would dispose of for $3,000. Miss Reynolds was willing to take $1,000 for hers. Murray, they stated, introduced a man who said he was a jeweler from Harrisburg, Pa.

The party met Saturday at the home of Miss Todd. The buyer gave her what she thought were three $1,000 bills. To Miss Reynolds he handed one of apparently the same denomination. Then it was suggested that the party, including Murray, should go to a bank where the young women could deposit the money. They altered a taxicab, but on the way the stranger had suffered with a heavy cold and has been advised by his physician not to make the trip. His absence would be felt keenly, as he is regarded as one of the strongest and most effective speakers of the Washington delegation. He had been expected to make the nominating speech for Colonel Jones.

ALLIES TO LET RUSS FIND OWN WAY OUT

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The allies cannot afford to continue intervention in "interminable and dangerous civil wars," Premier Lloyd George declared in his address in the Guild Hall yesterday.

"I hope during the coming winter the Russian people will reconsider the present situation and that the powers will have opportunity to promote peace and concord," the premier added. Speaking at the lord mayor's banquet, Lloyd George said he was confident the Adriatic question would be settled in a manner compatible with Italy's honor and that justice would be done nations emancipated from Austrian rule.

In Complete Agreement.

The allies are in complete agreement upon these questions, he said.

Turkish domination of Serbia, Armenia, and Arabia must end, the premier asserted, and the Black Sea be made free to all nations.

The Russian Situation, the premier described as "decidedly unpleasant." A "prolonged and sanguinary struggle" is indicated, he said.

General Yudenitch's advance upon Petrograd has failed, the premier admitted, and the advance of General Denikin's south Russian anti-Bolshevik armies has been checked. News from Omak also is "not reassuring," he said.

See Bolshevik Defeat.

The premier does not believe, however, that the Bolsheviks will be able to conquer all of Russia, he said, but their campaigns are apt to cause an "interminable series of devastations." Walter Hume Long, secretary of state for the colonies, declared the admiralty had determined to make the navy "efficient and sufficient, utilizing every discovery and invention." Whatever the size, he said, the navy "must be made the best."

Winston Churchill, minister of war, asserted the nation "might want the army again some day, despite the League of Nations, whereof we all have hoped so much."

PREACHER BREAKS UP SOVIET MEETING

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—A clergyman and a handful of his parishioners suddenly launching forth into "The Star-Spangled Banner" broke up a meeting here last night of the "Communists' Council of America," which was being addressed by Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes.

Hearing of the proposed meeting, the Rev. Dr. Francis Theodore Brown, of St. Andrew's Memorial Episcopal Church, arranged to have some of his flock present. When Mrs. Stokes attempted to expound the advantages the workingmen of the United States would enjoy under a soviet form of government, the man of the cloth interrupted her.

TRINITY FORUM HEARS INDIA LABOR ENVOY

B. P. Wadia, of India, representing that country at the International Labor conference, spoke at the Trinity Community Forum last night on "The Message of India to Democracy." The substance of the message was the ideal manifested by Manu, the great law-giver of the race, in saying that "Control by another, dependence on another, is misery. Control of self, self-independence, this is happiness."

The speaker praised the altruistic attitude of the United States in handling the Philippines and the efforts of President Wilson to establish a League of Nations. The league, he asserted, was a long stride in the direction of universal and perpetual peace, despite its numerous flaws.

FRENCH PRESIDENT ARRIVES IN LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The train bearing President Poincare arrived shortly before 2 o'clock, and the guests of the British nation were received at Victoria station by King George, Queen Mary, Premier Lloyd George and a huge body of royalties, court, diplomatic, cabinet, military and civic dignitaries.

Foreign Minister Arthur James Balfour, War Secretary Winston Churchill, Field Marshal Earl Haig and Admiral Beatty were among the early arrivals, and the leading members of the French colony in London were accorded prominent positions on the arrival platform.

A guard of honor of the Goldstream guards, with the regimental colors and band was drawn up on the red-carpeted platform, and as the presidential train slowed down the band played the "Marseillaise." The troops presenting arms. The King and Queen welcomed their guests with marked cordiality and heartiness, and then followed a little delay during round of presentation, the inspection of the guard of honor, etc., the band playing lively parade tunes meantime. Two little girls, daughters of the leading French resident, and the managing director of the railroad presented bouquets to Madame Poincare, after which hosts and guests moved toward the waiting carriages.

Escorted by equestrians in scarlet and gold and a cavalcade of Life Guards they drove through troop lined streets to Buckingham Palace, where the visitors will stay during their visit. Vast crowds gave the popular President a vociferous welcome all along the route. "Poincare" has now no difficulties for the English tongue, and the thousands of ex-soldiers and soldierettes led the way for their less educated brethren with enthusiastic versions of "Veevier Pree-donk. Vay Poonk-arry." Those who did not quite grasp the language joined it with the "Coree" heartily enough.

This afternoon was devoted to a round of formal calls, the President and his wife visiting Queen Mother Alexandra, the Duke of Connaught, Lloyd George and others. Tonight there will be a state banquet at Buckingham Palace, followed by a reception. Tomorrow the President is the guest of the lord mayor and city corporation at luncheon at the Guildhall.

TROOPS BATTLE CORK CIVILIANS

CORK, Nov. 10.—Scenes of terrorism were witnessed here last night when soldiers of an English regiment tried to wipe up civilians. They marched through the streets shouting "To hell with the Sinn Fein." Battles with civilians ensued. The police intervened on the side of the soldiers.

Armored cars were turned out and their appearance seemed to fire the soldiers to redoubled fervor. The whole regiment, armed with rifles, bayonets and revolvers, attacked civilians, smashed shops and institutions, a general reign of terror. Several shots were fired and when a couple of policemen were injured the rest of the police fled for their lives.
